Reading

Ways to save!Three teenagers tell us the new ways they have to save money

I enjoy reading and because I wanted to save some money, I decided to start selling my old books on a buy-and-sell site I found online. It works perfectly for me because I can easily sell my old books and then I buy other peoples' books. People sell their used books cheaply, so I don't spend a lot. I also earn discounts when I sell more than five books, so then the prices are much cheaper. It's the best! – Melissa

Last year, I discovered a website where you can swap video games. The idea is you exchange your old games with other people. So, you choose the game you've finished and agree to swap with the other person. The only cost is the delivery and the games are sent really quickly. The system is as fast as buying new games online but it's at least 60% cheaper so I can save more of my pocket money! – Tony

My bedroom is full of things so one day I decided to give away things I don't use now, like my old skateboard. There are groups online for this – you put up a picture of your object and usually after one day someone collects it. It couldn't be easier! I don't earn cash from this, but I'm slowly getting more space in my bedroom. These days, I don't waste money. I think more carefully about what I need, and I ask friends if I can borrow things. I feel better now I don't have all the extra things I had before! – Chris
